Weather

The best time to visit Costa Rica depends upon what you are looking to get out of your holiday, however a warm weather is almost always guaranteed! If beach days and outdoor activities are your priority, visiting between December and April is best. During these months you can expect warm temperatures, minimal rainfall and clear days. May to mid-November is referred to as Costa Rica's green season with rain falling heaviest in September and October. If visiting Costa Rica's famous jungle region is important to you, then visiting during the green season could reap rewards. The months of November, April and May are also ideal as the rains have either just stopped or are about to start. This means the country looks refreshed, green, warm and relatively unpopulated from tourist crowds.

Money Matters

The official currency of Costa Rica is the Costa Rican Colón (CRC). Credit and debit cards are accepted at major hotels and tourist attractions but are not accepted for small payments such as meals or snacks. ATMs (known as cajeros automáticos) are widely available in Costa Rica but some banks charge a fee for using an ATM abroad, so check with your bank before traveling. US Dollars are widely accepted, especially at upscale hotels and restaurants. For smaller services (including local meals or public transportation), be prepared to pay with colones. Travel Talk recommends you do not exchange bulk sums of money at the airport, as the exchange rates are usually more favourable in the major cities.

Please remember that everyone has different spending habits, some prefer to spend more on souvenirs, some on experiences and others on a night out! Make sure to budget your trip to your spending habits for shopping, drinking, and tipping.

Tipping is not compulsory in Costa Rica though some services such as restaurants add a ‘service charge’ on the final bill that includes 10% gratuity. If a ‘service charge’ is not already added to a bill, 10% is considered a sufficient amount to tip in appreciation of good service. You may also tip service staff such as maids and bartender. Leaving a few extra colons if the service exceeds your expectations, is also appreciated. Tips for such services usually range within 1-5 USD per day. You may also consider tipping your leader and driver for outstanding service at the end of your trip. The amount is entirely a personal preference.

Eating & Drinking

Heavily influenced by Spanish, South American, Caribbean and Central American flavours, there are so many delicious dishes you must try while visiting Costa Rica. Here are a couple of our favourites to get you started:

Casado: A typical plate of Costa Rican food, the dish traditionally includes rice and beans, a salad, fried sweet plantains and either fish, chicken, pork or beef.

Gallo Pinto: The nation’s signature dish, Gallo Pinto is a slowly cooked dish of rice, beans, onions, red peppers, and cilantro. The dish is served with eggs, fried cheese, sweet plantains, bread or corn tortillas.

Chifrijo: Typically served in bars, Chifrijo is a compact dish of rice and beans topped with fried pork meat, avocado, pico de gallo, chimichurri and lime. The dish is usually accompanied by tortilla chips and is best enjoyed with an ice-cold Pilsen in hand.

Sopa Mariscos: A tomato-based soup usually served on the coastline and packed with fresh seafood including squid, shrimp, clams, mussels, white fish and vegetables.

Tres Leches: This dessert gained its name for the ‘three milks’ used to create the delicious treat including milk, evaporated milk and sweetened condensed milk – topped with a heavy whipping of cream.

Arroz con leche: Sweet tooths will love this Central American dessert staple! Made from spiced, sweet rice pudding made with cinnamon, cloves and raisins. Try it as a warming snack or a special dessert.

While drinking a lot of water is crucial when adventuring around Costa Rica, don’t forget to unwind and try some of the country’s delicious traditional beverages. From sweet and creamy to buzz-provoking, these seven drinks are a delightful way to wet your whistle. Thanks to an extraordinary selection of exotic fruit within the country, Costa Rica is home to a delicious range of tropical Batidos (smoothies) and fresh juices. While Costa Rica is famous for its coffee, agua dulce is the traditional breakfast drink of choice. The hot beverage is made by boiling water and adding a piece of tapa de dulce - made from the liquid extracted from sugarcane. There are three go-to beers in Costa Rica which that are worth a try if you wish to taste the local drop – Pilsen, Bavaria and Imperial.

Internet Access

Wi-fi is readily available throughout Costa Rica. In many locations, including inside Costa Rica’s two international airports, restaurants, cafes, hotels and some cities’ central parks, Wi-Fi access is free, however the connection quality may differ. If you wish to use your own 3G/4G Data, be sure to enable data roaming on your mobile. Purchasing a Costa Rican SIM card for the duration of your tour may be a cost-effective alternative. Make sure that your phone is unlocked before you leave home so a local SIM will be compatible. Your local guide will be able to provide advice on where to purchase SIMs.

Culture, Religion, Traditions

Costa Rica is a cultural melting pot, heavily influenced by Spanish settlement as well as immigrant cultures including Jamaican and Chinese. The official language is Spanish, and the population is considered remarkably warm and friendly with no one considered an outsider here! Like most Latin Americans, 'Ticos' generally take a laid-back, relaxed approach to life. The spirit of mañana — putting things off for another day — is a constant theme, and personal warmth is generally given higher priority than personal achievement. Fiestas and Topes (horse shows) are a major component of the country's culture, explaining the vivacity of its people. Catholicism came to Costa Rica with the Spaniards in the 19th century, and the vast majority of Costa Rica's population are Christian with approximately 70% identifying as Roman Catholic.

Etiquette and How to Dress

In general, Costa Ricans are easy-going, friendly and informal people. This being said, they tend to be somewhat conservative and treating everyone with respect is paramount. Ticos typically dress casual and practically, and most locals will not make a fuss about what tourists wear. However, it is important to dress appropriate to occasion. For example, flip-flops and shorts are fine for a beach day, but clothing that covers both your shoulders and knees is expected while visiting religious sites. If you are unsure what to wear, your local guide will be more than happy to make suggestions on appropriate attire throughout the tour.
